
A simple request to Bush's critics

Posted by dailyherald - 2007/09/05 19:25

I would like to say to the anti-war people: If they can find a better flag to fly, then move out of our country and quit trying to tear it down.

At least President Bush did something about 9/11. When Clinton was president before him, he did nothing when terrorists tried to blow down the twin towers in the basement in 1992, when 39 marines lost their lives, when the navy ship was bombed in the Far East and

Read more...

Re: A simple request to Bush's critics

Posted by rolandkayser - 2007/09/05 19:48

Yes, Bush did something in response to 9/11. He did the exact thing Osama Bin Laden wanted him to do. We are in much worse shape because of his decision. It would compare to FDR invading Brazil in response to Pearl Harbor.

Re: A simple request to Bush's critics

Posted by Versus - 2007/09/05 19:53

Roland Kayser wrote:

Yes, Bush did something in response to 9/11. He did the exact thing Osama Bin Laden wanted him to do. We are in much worse shape because of his decision. It would compare to FDR invading Brazil in response to Pearl Harbor. If we would have invaded Brazil after Pearl Harbor, we wouldn't be in the mess we're in now. I'm surprised FDR didn't have the guts to act.

Re: A simple request to Bush's critics

Posted by american_patriot - 2007/09/06 00:00

dailyherald wrote:

I would like to say to the anti-war people: If they can find a better flag to fly, then move out of our country and quit trying to tear it down. At least President Bush did something about 9/11. When Clinton was president before him, he did nothing when terrorists tried to blow down the twin towers in the basement in 1992, when 39 marines lost their lives, when the navy ship was bombed in the Far East and

Read more...

Most of us critics of Bush are not anti-war, we are just against illegal and unconstitutional "war." Such as the mess we are in over in Iraq. There was not "real" declaration of war, just a resolution to use force by congress. In case you didn't know a resolution is meaningless, an unbinding piece of garbage saying we don't care what you do. We are not tearing down this country. That is being handled by our government. when Clinton was in office, he had way more important things (to him) that he was doing in the oval office to worry about what was going on in the world outside.

As for Bush doing something about 9-11, he sure did do something. He invaded a sovereign country (Iraq) that had nothing to do with the attack on us. (That is a proven fact by now.) And he has allowed thousands of our soldiers to die, and has allowed our military to kill countless tens (if not hundreds) of thousands of Iraqi citizens.

That is the measure of the Man in the white house now. A warmonger, and a traitor to say the least. You can support him all you want, living in your make believe world where all is well in the US because the economy is (supposedly) good. You are just living in denial of what is really happening. I would feel sorry for you, but I have heard and had enough of people like you to be able to do so any longer.

=====

Re: A simple request to Bush's critics

Posted by ericmiami - 2007/09/06 07:37

dailyherald wrote:

I would like to say to the anti-war people: If they can find a better flag to fly, then move out of our country and quit trying to tear it down. At least President Bush did something about 9/11. When Clinton was president before him, he did nothing when terrorists tried to blow down the twin towers in the basement in 1992, when 39 marines lost their lives, when the navy ship was bombed in the Far East and

Read more...

A "simple" request is right.

=====

Re: A simple request to Bush's critics

Posted by Phantom Cat - 2007/09/07 15:48

Bush used 9/11 to continue his father's dream of building "a New World Order." Bush's administration is loaded with CFR "world order" types. He uses the patriotism of conservatives to destroy the nation-state. While "conservatives" support his "war on terror," Bush quietly works to erase our borders with Canada and Mexico. He and his CFR buddies want to expand NAFTA and create a North American Union. So, while "conservatives" support Bush, he stabs them in the back by pushing NAU and amnesty for millions of illegal aliens. Personally, as a Republican, I hope this is the last Bush we see as President. The Bush family's fake conservatism has greatly harmed the Republican Party. No more Jorge W. Bushes, no more NAFTAs and GATTs, no more fake conservatism! We need a patriotic President and Congress who respect the Constitution and the nation-state (the good old US of A)!

=====

Re: A simple request to Bush's critics

Posted by iceman - 2007/09/07 15:59

dailyherald wrote:

I would like to say to the anti-war people: If they can find a better flag to fly, then move out of our country and quit trying to tear it down. At least President Bush did something about 9/11. When Clinton was president before him, he did nothing when terrorists tried to blow down the twin towers in the basement in 1992, when 39 marines lost their lives, when the navy ship was bombed in the Far East and

Read more...

FGB

=====

Re: A simple request to Bush's critics

Posted by Blondie - 2007/09/07 16:04

Iceman, Member, Quorum of Heathens and Uppity Wenches wrote:

dailyherald wrote:

I would like to say to the anti-war people: If they can find a better flag to fly, then move out of our country and quit trying to tear it down. At least President Bush did something about 9/11. When Clinton was president before him, he did nothing when terrorists tried to blow down the twin towers in the basement in 1992, when 39 marines lost their lives, when the navy ship was bombed in the Far East and

Read more...

FGB

Iceman does that mean what I think it means..... if so ... I agree.....lol :-* ;)

=====

Re: A simple request to Bush's critics

Posted by ericmiami - 2007/09/07 16:10

Blondie wrote:

Iceman, Member, Quorum of Heathens and Uppity Wenches wrote:

dailyherald wrote:

I would like to say to the anti-war people: If they can find a better flag to fly, then move out of our country and quit trying to tear it down. At least President Bush did something about 9/11. When Clinton was president before him, he did nothing when terrorists tried to blow down the twin towers in the basement in 1992, when 39 marines lost their lives, when the navy ship was bombed in the Far East and

Read more...

FGB

Iceman does that mean what I think it means..... if so ... I agree.....lol :-* ;)

I'd like to convey that sentiment in person.

=====

Re: A simple request to Bush's critics

Posted by dave - 2007/09/07 16:14

There are posts missing from this thread. Where are they? There was nothing remotely offensive in the posts.....

=====

Re: A simple request to Bush's critics

Posted by Betz - 2007/09/07 16:15

dave wrote:

There are posts missing from this thread. Where are they? There was nothing remotely offensive in the posts.....

Everything from about 10:00 a.m yesterday until late this morning was deleted for some unknown reason.

=====

Re: A simple request to Bush's critics

Posted by ericmiami - 2007/09/07 16:16

Betz wrote:

dave wrote:

There are posts missing from this thread. Where are they? There was nothing remotely offensive in the posts.....

Everything from about 10:00 a.m yesterday until late this morning was deleted for some unknown reason.

I suspect it was Alberto Gonzales' last stand.

=====

Re: A simple request to Bush's critics

Posted by truthhurts - 2007/09/07 16:20

Betz wrote:

dave wrote:

There are posts missing from this thread. Where are they? There was nothing remotely offensive in the posts.....

Everything from about 10:00 a.m yesterday until late this morning was deleted for some unknown reason.

Someone at the DH zigged when they should have zagged, perhaps? Sign him up to be a presidential adviser. :D

RushReader has all the necessary forms.

=====

Re: A simple request to Bush's critics

Posted by Blondie - 2007/09/07 16:49

ericmiami wrote:

Blondie wrote:

Iceman, Member, Quorum of Heathens and Uppity Wenches wrote:

dailyherald wrote:

I would like to say to the anti-war people: If they can find a better flag to fly, then move out of our country and quit trying to tear it down. At least President Bush did something about 9/11. When Clinton was president before him, he did nothing when terrorists tried to blow down the twin towers in the basement in 1992, when 39 marines lost their lives, when the navy ship was bombed in the Far East and

Read more...

FGB

Iceman does that mean what I think it means..... if so ... I agree.....lol :-* ;)

I'd like to convey that sentiment in person.

Eric, There would probably a few of us at this point in time..... :- ;)

=====

Re: A simple request to Bush's critics

Posted by Betz - 2007/09/07 16:58

ericmiami wrote:

Betz wrote:

dave wrote:

There are posts missing from this thread. Where are they? There was nothing remotely offensive in the posts.....

Everything from about 10:00 a.m yesterday until late this morning was deleted for some unknown reason.

I suspect it was Alberto Gonzales' last stand.

I think it was because The Keeper posted a story that we didn't have a need-to-know. That's my theory and I'm sticking to it! ;) ;D

=====

Re: A simple request to Bush's critics

Posted by dave - 2007/09/07 17:00

Betz wrote:

ericmiami wrote:

Betz wrote:

dave wrote:

There are posts missing from this thread. Where are they? There was nothing remotely offensive in the posts.....

Everything from about 10:00 a.m yesterday until late this morning was deleted for some unknown reason.

I suspect it was Alberto Gonzales' last stand.

I think it was because The Keeper posted a story that we didn't have a need-to-know. That's my theory and I'm sticking to it! ;) ;D

Oh, ok, back to the boobies thread..... :o

=====

Re: A simple request to Bush's critics

Posted by ericmiami - 2007/09/07 17:23

Blondie wrote:

ericmiami wrote:

Blondie wrote:

Iceman, Member, Quorum of Heathens and Uppity Wenches wrote:

dailyherald wrote:

I would like to say to the anti-war people: If they can find a better flag to fly, then move out of our country and quit trying to tear it down. At least President Bush did something about 9/11. When Clinton was president before him, he did nothing when terrorists tried to blow down the twin towers in the basement in 1992, when 39 marines lost their lives, when the navy ship was bombed in the Far East and

Read more...

FGB

Iceman does that mean what I think it means..... if so ... I agree.....lol :-* ;)

I'd like to convey that sentiment in person.

Eric, There would probably a few of us at this point in time..... :- ;)

Guess we'd have to stand in line. I can picture that. I'd stand in line. I'd camp out to be first.

=====

Re: A simple request to Bush's critics

Posted by anonymous - 2007/09/08 00:08

ericmiami wrote:

dailyherald wrote:

I would like to say to the anti-war people: If they can find a better flag to fly, then move out of our country and quit trying to tear it down. At least President Bush did something about 9/11. When Clinton was president before him, he did nothing when terrorists tried to blow down the twin towers in the basement in 1992, when 39 marines lost their lives, when the navy ship was bombed in the Far East and

Read more...

A "simple" request is right.

A "simple" request by a simpler mind.

=====

Re: A simple request to Bush's critics

Posted by gaystaterefugee - 2007/09/08 06:05

Roland Kayser wrote:

Yes, Bush did something in response to 9/11. He did the exact thing Osama Bin Laden wanted him to do. We are in much worse shape because of his decision. It would compare to FDR invading Brazil in response to Pearl Harbor.

Lib Sucker! (all-day variety of course)

=====

Re: A simple request to Bush's critics

Posted by gaystaterefugee - 2007/09/08 06:10

american_patriot wrote:

dailyherald wrote:

I would like to say to the anti-war people: If they can find a better flag to fly, then move out of our country and quit trying to tear it down. At least President Bush did something about 9/11. When Clinton was president before him, he did nothing when terrorists tried to blow down the twin towers in the basement in 1992, when 39 marines lost their lives, when the navy ship was bombed in the Far East and

Read more...

Most of us critics of Bush are not anti-war, we are just against illegal and unconstitutional "war." Such as the mess we are in over in Iraq. There was not "real" declaration of war, just a resolution to use force by congress. In case you didn't know a resolution is meaningless, an unbinding piece of garbage saying we don't care what you do. We are not tearing down this country. That is being handled by our government.
when Clinton was in office, he had way more important things (to him) that he was doing in the oval office to worry about what was going on in the world outside.

As for Bush doing something about 9-11, he sure did do something. He invaded a sovereign country (Iraq) that had nothing to do with the attack on us. (That is a proven fact by now.) And he has allowed thousands of our soldiers to die, and has allowed our military to kill countless tens (if not hundreds) of thousands of Iraqi citizens. That is the measure of the Man in the white house now. A warmonger, and a traitor to say the least. You can support him all you want, living in your make believe world where all is well in the US because the economy is (supposedly) good. You are just living in denial of what is really happening. I would feel sorry for you, but I have heard and had enough of people like you to be able to do so any longer.

"way more important"CIGAR PERCH MAYBE! (did I mention the small issue of impeachment and disbarment?)
Koolaid!

=====

Re: A simple request to Bush's critics

Posted by rolandkayser - 2007/09/08 09:19

gaystaterefugee wrote:

Roland Kayser wrote:

Yes, Bush did something in response to 9/11. He did the exact thing Osama Bin Laden wanted him to do. We are in much worse shape because of his decision. It would compare to FDR invading Brazil in response to Pearl Harbor.

Lib Sucker! (all-day variety of course)

Your witty and erudite rebuttal has left me dumbfounded. I will cease posting until I am better able to emulate your soporific solecisms and wry insouciance. You steatopygous slubberdegullion.

=====

Re: A simple request to Bush's critics

Posted by ericmiami - 2007/09/08 09:45

Roland Kayser wrote:

gaystaterefugee wrote:

Roland Kayser wrote:

Yes, Bush did something in response to 9/11. He did the exact thing Osama Bin Laden wanted him to do. We are in much worse shape because of his decision. It would compare to FDR invading Brazil in response to Pearl Harbor.

Lib Sucker! (all-day variety of course)

Your witty and erudite rebuttal has left me dumbfounded. I will cease posting until I am better able to emulate your soporific solecisms and wry insouciance. You steatopygous slubberdegullion.

Not bad.

You might be the Rabelais of our time, Roland.

He said, and he might have been referring to mental giants like Gay: "prattling gabblers, lickorous gluttons, freckled bittors, mangy rascals, shite-a-bed scoundrels, drunken roysters, sly knaves, drowsy loiterers, slapsauce fellows, slabberdegullion druggels, lubberly louts, cozening foxes, ruffian rogues, paltry customers, sycophant-varlets, drawlatch hoydens, flouting milksops, jeering companions, staring clowns, forlorn snakes, ninny lobcocks, scurvy sneaksbies, fondling fops, base loons, saucy coxcombs, idle lusks, scoffing braggarts, noddy meacocks, blockish grutnols, doddipol-joltheads, jobbermol goosecaps, foolish loggerheads, flutch calf-lollies, grouthead gnat-snappers, lob-dotterels, gaping changelings, codshead loobies, woodcock slangams, ninny-hammer flycatchers, noddypeak simpletons, turdy gut, shitten shepherds, and other suchlike defamatory epithets."

=====

Re: A simple request to Bush's critics

Posted by Wren - 2007/09/08 10:24

GSR is a simple example of BY's statements about "shitten puppies."

Simply ignore them, and if they get underfoot, kick them away.

=====

Re: A simple request to Bush's critics

Posted by rolandkayser - 2007/09/09 20:41

ericmiami wrote:

Roland Kayser wrote:

gaystaterefugee wrote:

Roland Kayser wrote:

Yes, Bush did something in response to 9/11. He did the exact thing Osama Bin Laden wanted him to do. We are in much worse shape because of his decision. It would compare to FDR invading Brazil in response to Pearl Harbor.

Lib Sucker! (all-day variety of course)

Your witty and erudite rebuttal has left me dumbfounded. I will cease posting until I am better able to emulate your soporific solecisms and wry insouciance. You steatopygous slubberdegullion.

Not bad.

You might be the Rabelais of our time, Roland.

He said, and he might have been referring to mental giants like Gay: "prattling gabblers, lickorous gluttons, freckled bittors, mangy rascals, shite-a-bed scoundrels, drunken roysters, sly knaves, drowsy loiterers, slapsauce fellows, slabberdegullion druggels, lubberly louts, cozening foxes, ruffian rogues, paltry customers, sycophant-varlets, drawlatch hoydens, flouting milksops, jeering companions, staring clowns, forlorn snakes, ninny lobcocks, scurvy sneaksbies, fondling fops, base loons, saucy coxcombs, idle lusks, scoffing braggarts, noddy meacocks, blockish grutnols, doddipol-joltheads, jobbermol goosecaps, foolish loggerheads, flutch calf-lollies, grouthead gnat-snappers, lob-dotterels, gaping changelings, codshead loobies, woodcock slangams, ninny-hammer flycatchers, noddypeak simpletons, turdy gut, shitten shepherds, and other suchlike defamatory epithets."

Ahh, Rabelais--thanks.

Re: A simple request to Bush's critics

Posted by iceman - 2007/09/09 21:23

Blondie wrote:

Iceman, Member, Quorum of Heathens and Uppity Wenches wrote:

dailyherald wrote:

I would like to say to the anti-war people: If they can find a better flag to fly, then move out of our country and quit trying to tear it down. At least President Bush did something about 9/11. When Clinton was president before him, he did nothing when terrorists tried to blow down the twin towers in the basement in 1992, when 39 marines lost their lives, when the navy ship was bombed in the Far East and

Read more...

FGB

Iceman does that mean what I think it means..... if so ... I agree.....lol :-* ;)

See, you really are my sister!

=====

Re: A simple request to Bush's critics

Posted by Blondie - 2007/09/10 08:53

Iceman, Member, Quorum of Heathens and Uppity Wenches wrote:

Blondie wrote:

Iceman, Member, Quorum of Heathens and Uppity Wenches wrote:

dailyherald wrote:

I would like to say to the anti-war people: If they can find a better flag to fly, then move out of our country and quit trying to tear it down. At least President Bush did something about 9/11. When Clinton was president before him, he did nothing when terrorists tried to blow down the twin towers in the basement in 1992, when 39 marines lost their lives, when the navy ship was bombed in the Far East and

Read more...

FGB

Iceman does that mean what I think it means..... if so ... I agree.....lol :-* ;)

See, you really are my sister!

^5^ on That one.... You bet...Bro :-* :-* :-*

=====

Re: A simple request to Bush's critics

Posted by iceman - 2007/09/10 09:00

Blondie wrote:

Iceman, Member, Quorum of Heathens and Uppity Wenches wrote:

Blondie wrote:

Iceman, Member, Quorum of Heathens and Uppity Wenches wrote:

dailyherald wrote:

I would like to say to the anti-war people: If they can find a better flag to fly, then move out of our country and quit trying to tear it down. At least President Bush did something about 9/11. When Clinton was president before him, he did nothing when terrorists tried to blow down the twin towers in the basement in 1992, when 39 marines lost their lives, when the navy ship was bombed in the Far East and

Read more...

FGB

Iceman does that mean what I think it means..... if so ... I agree.....lol :-* ;)

See, you really are my sister!

^5^ on That one.... You bet...Bro :-* :-* :-*

Here you go Sis...

Poor George...

August 31, 2007

WASHINGTON, DC"A confused President Bush broke free from the restraint of Secret Service agents this morning and ran in pursuit of departing deputy chief of staff Karl Rove's car for several blocks down Pennsylvania Avenue before being outdistanced by the vehicle.

Enlarge Image

Bush sits in disbelief as his longtime buddy disappears forever and ever and ever.

"Why can't I go with him?" Bush tearfully asked advisers as the longtime Republican strategist's sedan disappeared over the horizon. "When is he coming back?"

White House staff were deeply moved by the scene, saying that despite their best efforts, no one was able to explain to the president that he would no longer be able to remain at his chief adviser's side. Onlookers were clearly choked up as a tearful Rove, trying to close the car door behind him, told Bush in a stern, commanding tone to back away.

"Go on you hear me? Get out of here, I say!" Rove said. "I don't love you anymore, understand? Now get! Get!"

Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice witnessed the emotionally charged moment. "We knew that deep down still cared, that he was only pretending to be mad at the president," she said. "But he had no choice. Leaving was the only way to avoid the ongoing Congressional inquiries."

Rove reportedly tried to prepare Bush for this inevitability in late July by taking him on a special fishing trip so they could spend some quality time together and he could also give Bush a brief rundown on how the presidency works. Rove said he "didn't have the heart" to break the news to the president, who fell asleep in their rowboat with the fishing pole still in his hands. On his last day, nearly two weeks later, Rove spent the whole morning with Bush before the tear-jerking exit, ruffling his hair, telling him to "be brave" and "listen to Cheney," and explaining that he was going to have to be "the man of the White House now."

Enlarge Image

Rove was finally able to leave the White House, despite Bush's heartrending stalling tactics.

Though Rove's resignation had been imminent for weeks, Bush appeared oblivious to the situation, which is evident in photos of him smiling as if nothing were wrong until the moment he discovered several suitcases near one of the West Wing's back-door exits. According to high-level administration sources, Bush asked Rove, "Where are we going?"

While sneaking the departing official out to a waiting town car, Secret Service agents were briefly able to deceive Bush by telling him Rove was just running down to the cellar to get him some ice cream. But when Bush heard the car's engine start in the driveway, he burst outside to stop Rove.

"I'll never forget the sight of the president, watching Rove's face in the back window becoming smaller and smaller as the car pulled away forever," Rice said.

The president continued to ask about his former adviser throughout the day, often clutching Rove's day planner, dialing his extension, and blinking uncomprehendingly when told that Rove was never coming back.

White House press secretary Tony Snow was finally called in to attempt to convey the reality of the situation to the president, but he was unable to do so.

"He kept looking up at me with those wide, innocent eyes, and I didn't know what to say," Snow told reporters. "Maybe someday when he's older, he'll understand how the public lost trust in his big buddy after a series of crucial political missteps, and how firing those attorneys and the..."

At this point in the briefing Snow fell silent, overcome with emotion, and moving many in the press room to tears.

White House officials say they would like to give President Bush more time to process the loss before pressuring him to appoint a new deputy chief of staff, since he does not yet appear ready to confront the concept of a "new Rove."

Bush sits in disbelief as his longtime buddy disappears forever and ever and ever.

Rove was finally able to leave the White House, despite Bush's heartrending stalling tactics.

=====

Re: A simple request to Bush's critics

Posted by ericmiami - 2007/09/10 09:24

That's one of the most heart-wrenching stories I've read since "Lassie, Come Home."

=====

Re: A simple request to Bush's critics

Posted by iceman - 2007/09/10 09:36

ericmiami wrote:

That's one of the most heart-wrenching stories I've read since "Lassie, Come Home."

I know...brought a tear to my eye...that he didn't keep on running.

=====

Re: A simple request to Bush's critics

Posted by Blondie - 2007/09/11 11:46

Iceman, Member, Quorum of Heathens and Uppity Wenches wrote:

Blondie wrote:

Iceman, Member, Quorum of Heathens and Uppity Wenches wrote:

Blondie wrote:

Iceman, Member, Quorum of Heathens and Uppity Wenches wrote:

dailyherald wrote:

I would like to say to the anti-war people: If they can find a better flag to fly, then move out of our country and quit trying to tear it down. At least President Bush did something about 9/11. When Clinton was president before him, he did nothing when terrorists tried to blow down the twin towers in the basement in 1992, when 39 marines lost their lives, when the navy ship was bombed in the Far East and

Read more...

FGB

Iceman does that mean what I think it means..... if so ... I agree.....lol :-* ;)

See, you really are my sister!

^5^ on That one.... You bet...Bro :-* :-* :-*

Here you go Sis...

Poor George...

August 31, 2007

WASHINGTON, DC" A confused President Bush broke free from the restraint of Secret Service agents this morning and ran in pursuit of departing deputy chief of staff Karl Rove's car for several blocks down Pennsylvania Avenue before being outdistanced by the vehicle.

Enlarge Image

Bush sits in disbelief as his longtime buddy disappears forever and ever and ever.

"Why can't I go with him?" Bush tearfully asked advisers as the longtime Republican strategist's sedan disappeared over the horizon. "When is he coming back?"

White House staff were deeply moved by the scene, saying that despite their best efforts, no one was able to explain to the president that he would no longer be able to remain at his chief adviser's side. Onlookers were clearly choked up as a tearful Rove, trying to close the car door behind him, told Bush in a stern, commanding tone to back away.

"Go on you hear me? Get out of here, I say!" Rove said. "I don't love you anymore, understand? Now get! Get!"

Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice witnessed the emotionally charged moment. "We knew that deep down still cared, that he was only pretending to be mad at the president," she said. "But he had no choice. Leaving was the only way to avoid the ongoing Congressional inquiries."

Rove reportedly tried to prepare Bush for this inevitability in late July by taking him on a special fishing trip so they could spend some quality time together and he could also give Bush a brief rundown on how the presidency works. Rove said he "didn't have the heart" to break the news to the president, who fell asleep in their rowboat with the fishing pole still in his hands. On his last day, nearly two weeks later, Rove spent the whole morning with Bush before the tear-jerking exit, ruffling his hair, telling him to "be brave" and "listen to Cheney," and explaining that he was going to have to be "the man of the White House now."

Enlarge Image

Rove was finally able to leave the White House, despite Bush's heartrending stalling tactics.

Though Rove's resignation had been imminent for weeks, Bush appeared oblivious to the situation, which is evident in photos of him smiling as if nothing were wrong until the moment he discovered several suitcases near one of the West Wing's back-door exits. According to high-level administration sources, Bush asked Rove, "Where are we going?"

While sneaking the departing official out to a waiting town car, Secret Service agents were briefly able to deceive Bush by telling him Rove was just running down to the cellar to get him some ice cream. But when Bush heard the car's engine start in the driveway, he burst outside to stop Rove.

"I'll never forget the sight of the president, watching Rove's face in the back window becoming smaller and smaller as the car pulled away forever," Rice said.

The president continued to ask about his former adviser throughout the day, often clutching Rove's day planner, dialing his extension, and blinking uncomprehendingly when told that Rove was never coming back.

White House press secretary Tony Snow was finally called in to attempt to convey the reality of the situation to the president, but he was unable to do so.

"He kept looking up at me with those wide, innocent eyes, and I didn't know what to say," Snow told reporters. "Maybe someday when he's older, he'll understand how the public lost trust in his big buddy after a series of crucial political missteps, and how firing those attorneys and the..."

At this point in the briefing Snow fell silent, overcome with emotion, and moving many in the press room to tears.

White House officials say they would like to give President Bush more time to process the loss before pressuring him to appoint a new deputy chief of staff, since he does not yet appear ready to confront the concept of a "new Rove."

Bush sits in disbelief as his longtime buddy disappears forever and ever and ever.

Rove was finally able to leave the White House, despite Bush's heartrending stalling tactics.

Hey Bro,

Next time you decide to tell me a heart-wrenching :(:(story, please give me the heads up. I was so entrenched in your story :-..... cleaning my monitor, lost my morning coffee..LSHROFL... You are soooooooooooooo good..... :P :-* :-*...

Love ya Bro....

Re: A simple request to Bush's critics

Posted by Blondie - 2007/09/11 11:51

Iceman, Member, Quorum of Heathens and Uppity Wenches wrote:

ericmiami wrote:

That's one of the most heart-wrenching stories I've read since "Lassie, Come Home."

I know...brought a tear to my eye...that he didn't keep on running.

Yes it would have been better if he kept running back to his horsey and take a long ride..Too bad Rove did not take him with him as a sidekick to the comedy act we have been a part of, for too long..... :- :-

Re: A simple request to Bush's critics

Posted by iceman - 2007/09/11 12:53

Blondie wrote:

Iceman, Member, Quorum of Heathens and Uppity Wenches wrote:

ericmiami wrote:

That's one of the most heart-wrenching stories I've read since "Lassie, Come Home."

I know...brought a tear to my eye...that he didn't keep on running.

Yes it would have been better if he kept running back to his horsey and take a long ride..Too bad Rove did not take him with him as a sidekick to the comedy act we have been a part of, for too long..... :- :-

mental picture..."RUN FOREST RUN!!"

Re: A simple request to Bush's critics

Posted by iceman - 2007/09/11 13:01

Blondie wrote:

Iceman, Member, Quorum of Heathens and Uppity Wenches wrote:

Blondie wrote:

Iceman, Member, Quorum of Heathens and Uppity Wenches wrote:

Blondie wrote:

Iceman, Member, Quorum of Heathens and Uppity Wenches wrote:

dailyherald wrote:

I would like to say to the anti-war people: If they can find a better flag to fly, then move out of our country and quit trying to tear it down. At least President Bush did something about 9/11. When Clinton was president before him, he did nothing when terrorists tried to blow down the twin towers in the basement in 1992, when 39 marines lost their lives, when the navy ship was bombed in the Far East and

Read more...

FGB

Iceman does that mean what I think it means..... if so ... I agree.....lol :-* ;)

See, you really are my sister!

^5^ on That one.... You bet...Bro :-* :-* :-*

Here you go Sis...

Poor George...

August 31, 2007

WASHINGTON, DC??A confused President Bush broke free from the restraint of Secret Service agents this morning and ran in pursuit of departing deputy chief of staff Karl Rove's car for several blocks down Pennsylvania Avenue before being outdistanced by the vehicle.

Enlarge Image

Bush sits in disbelief as his longtime buddy disappears forever and ever and ever.

"Why can't I go with him?" Bush tearfully asked advisers as the longtime Republican strategist's sedan disappeared over the horizon. "When is he coming back?"

White House staff were deeply moved by the scene, saying that despite their best efforts, no one was able to explain to the president that he would no longer be able to remain at his chief adviser's side. Onlookers were clearly choked up as a tearful Rove, trying to close the car door behind him, told Bush in a stern, commanding tone to back away.

"Go on?you hear me? Get out of here, I say!" Rove said. "I don't love you anymore, understand? Now get! Get!"

Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice witnessed the emotionally charged moment. "We knew that deep down still cared, that he was only pretending to be mad at the president," she said. "But he had no choice. Leaving was the only way to avoid the ongoing Congressional inquiries."

Rove reportedly tried to prepare Bush for this inevitability in late July by taking him on a special fishing trip so they could spend some quality time together and he could also give Bush a brief rundown on how the presidency works. Rove said he "didn't have the heart" to break the news to the president, who fell asleep in their rowboat with the fishing pole still in his hands. On his last day, nearly two weeks later, Rove spent the whole morning with Bush before the tear-jerking exit, ruffling his hair, telling him to "be brave" and "listen to Cheney," and explaining that he was going to have to be "the man of the White House now."

Enlarge Image

Rove was finally able to leave the White House, despite Bush's heartrending stalling tactics.

Though Rove's resignation had been imminent for weeks, Bush appeared oblivious to the situation, which is evident in photos of him smiling as if nothing were wrong until the moment he discovered several suitcases near one of the West Wing's back-door exits. According to high-level administration sources, Bush asked Rove, "Where are we going?"

While sneaking the departing official out to a waiting town car, Secret Service agents were briefly able to deceive Bush by telling him Rove was just running down to the cellar to get him some ice cream. But when Bush heard the car's engine start in the driveway, he burst outside to stop Rove.

"I'll never forget the sight of the president, watching Rove's face in the back window becoming smaller and smaller as the car pulled away forever," Rice said.

The president continued to ask about his former adviser throughout the day, often clutching Rove's day planner, dialing his extension, and blinking uncomprehendingly when told that Rove was never coming back.

White House press secretary Tony Snow was finally called in to attempt to convey the reality of the situation to the president, but he was unable to do so.

"He kept looking up at me with those wide, innocent eyes, and I didn't know what to say," Snow told reporters. "Maybe someday when he's older, he'll understand how the public lost trust in his big buddy after a series of crucial political missteps, and how firing those attorneys and the..."

At this point in the briefing Snow fell silent, overcome with emotion, and moving many in the press room to tears.

White House officials say they would like to give President Bush more time to process the loss before pressuring him to appoint a new deputy chief of staff, since he does not yet appear ready to confront the concept of a "new Rove."

Bush sits in disbelief as his longtime buddy disappears forever and ever and ever.

Rove was finally able to leave the White House, despite Bush's heartrending stalling tactics.

Hey Bro,

Next time you decide to tell me a heart-wrenching :(:(story, please give me the heads up. I was so entrenched in your story :-..... cleaning my monitor, lost my morning coffee..LSHROFL... You are soooooooooooooo good..... :P :-* :-*... Love ya Bro....

WARNING, Coffee Mess!!

Bush Proposes Sending Transformers to Iraq

Awards $85B Defense Contract to Hasbro

Washington (UPA) September 11, 2007

Increasingly frustrated by the Iraqi governments failure to meet a series of defined benchmarks, President George W. Bush today proposed sending a group of giant robots known as the Transformers to Iraq.

Aides to the president were vague as to when Mr. Bush arrived at his new Transformers strategy, but sources say that he devised the plan last week, shortly after a surprise visit to a multiplex in Bethesda, Maryland.

In announcing his new proposal, the president authorized an $85 billion defense contract to Hasbro, believed to be the largest military contract of its kind ever awarded to a toy company.

At a White House press conference, the president expressed his confidence that the Transformers would succeed where the Iraq government had failed.

Id like to see what would happen if al-Qaeda tried to attack one of our tanks, and instead the tank got up on its legs and turned out to be a robot and started shooting at them, Mr. Bush said. That would be so cool.

But even as the president announced his new plan for victory in Iraq, congressional critics questioned the wisdom of dispatching Transformers to the war-torn nation.

A tank that can turn into a giant robot is awesome, but its not an exit strategy, said Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid (D-NV).

Responding to his critics, Mr. Bush said that he would announce an exit strategy later this week after consulting with his newest advisor, J.K. Rowling.

She has experience at ending things, Mr. Bush said.

=====