

---

View Cannon\'s record for yourself

Posted by WatchDog - 2008/04/26 08:40

---

This thread discusses the Content article: View Cannon's record for yourself

What?

No mention of the fact that he sponsored the Student Adjustment Act, to give criminal illegal aliens instate tuition rates?

No mention of the fact that he supports No Child Left Behind (still), even though the program is proving to be an expensive failure?

No mention of the fact that he voted for the Patriot Act - without ever reading the bill - at all?

No mention of the fact that he received an Award for Excellence from MALDEF (Mexican American Legal Defense & Education Foundation) whose treasonous goal is the promotion of the illegal invasion of this country by Mexico and its citizens?

Your article only proves where you stand, certainly not what is good for this country - or its citizens!

David Levitt would just be more of the same as Cannon on most of these very important issues.

Jason Chaffez might be considerably better, but without a proven track record, who knows if he is telling us the truth, or what he thinks we want to hear. He was even a Democrat a few years back!

Joe Ferguson, on the other hand, has a track record, and takes a very conserve position, and has done so for years.

Guess who I am voting for, given the chance?

=====

Re:View Cannon\'s record for yourself

Posted by thereitis - 2008/04/26 12:42

---

Cannon has improved on immigration substantially over the past few years. He sponsored the instate tuition bill though he has also cosponsored the SAVE Act and he also signed the discharge petition to have congress vote on the SAVE Act. Over the past few years he has voted Yes on every tough enforcement measure that has come across Congress.

So past sins one thing, what he has done for the past few years is very important.

I agree that Leavitt is trouble. He is a neoconservative that will say anything to get elected.

Chaffetz is a nice guy whose only track record is that of being pretty liberal.

A Joe Ferguson is a stud though I don't see him getting the traction needed to win.

I will support Cannon first, Ferguson second and then do a write-in for third. No way I can vote for Leavitt or Chaffetz.

=====