
RICH LOWRY: Will GOP commit

'Huck-icide'?

Posted by dailyherald - 2007/12/15 00:06

The ghost of Howard Dean haunts the pundit class. As soon as a candidate of either party spikes up in the polls, he is compared with Dean, who had a spectacular boomlet in the second half of 2003 only to deflate as soon as people began to vote in early 2004.

Read more...

=====

Re: RICH LOWRY: Will GOP commit

Posted by The Keeper - 2007/12/15 10:48

gopherus wrote:

dailyherald wrote:

The ghost of Howard Dean haunts the pundit class. As soon as a candidate of either party spikes up in the polls, he is compared with Dean, who had a spectacular boomlet in the second half of 2003 only to deflate as soon as people began to vote in early 2004.

Read more...

If you've got a sack full of douche-bags and you reach in and grab something you're going to get a douche-bag. That's all the Republicans can do this time around.

The "Democrat" face and the "Republican" face are just two faces of the one ruling class. The only real difference is that the "Democratic" face wants a tiny bit MORE control and robbery than the "Republican" face. (At least, that's what their empty rhetoric indicates.)

=====

Re: RICH LOWRY: Will GOP commit

Posted by Death_and_Taxes - 2007/12/15 11:37

Unfortunately some old prejudices may get the Huckster elected. The guy is not a conservative at all and lately he sounds like an ignorant bush hating liberal instead of the "candidate for Christ."

=====

Re: RICH LOWRY: Will GOP commit'Huck-icide'?

Posted by rolandkayser - 2007/12/15 23:32

Economic populism combined with cultural conservatism sounds a lot like Pat Buchanan. Huckabee just sounds nicer when he says the same things.

=====

Re: RICH LOWRY: Will GOP commit

Posted by leftintheuc - 2007/12/16 08:48

gopherus wrote:

If you've got a sack full of douche-bags and you reach in and grab something you're going to get a douche-bag. That's all the Republicans can do this time around.

While were on the subject, this makes a great Christmas present! Sacks'a douche-bags all 'round!

=====

Re: RICH LOWRY: Will GOP commit

Posted by unaffiliated_person - 2007/12/18 11:49

Seems like only one candidate has not been bought by the special interests:

<http://www.cnn.com/2007/POLITICS/12/18/paul.fundraising/index.html>

I admit I do not know much about Ron Paul, but his ideas are growing on me.

=====

Re: RICH LOWRY: Will GOP commit

Posted by James T. - 2007/12/18 14:01

The Keeper wrote:

...The only real difference is that the "Democratic" face wants a tiny bit MORE control and robbery than the "Republican" face.

Democrat: Tax and Spend

Today's Republican: Borrow and Spend

There really isn't that much difference in how they act these days. True Republican versus true Democrat fiscal ideals are vastly different. These days the Republicans seem willing to spend, they just don't want to have to come up with the money for it.

=====

Re: RICH LOWRY: Will GOP commit'Huck-icide'?

Posted by James T. - 2007/12/18 14:04

If Huckabee is the Republican nomination, what are the odds that he doesn't carry Utah? Or Idaho? Or Nevada? Or Arizona? It would be an interesting test of religious tolerance to see if the LDS would vote for a guy who clearly isn't necessarily in our cheering section.

I am afraid I would fail this tolerance test...

=====

Re: RICH LOWRY: Will GOP commit

Posted by unaffiliated_person - 2007/12/18 16:18

James T. wrote:

The Keeper wrote:

...The only real difference is that the "Democratic" face wants a tiny bit MORE control and robbery than the "Republican" face.

Democrat: Tax and Spend
Today's Republican: Borrow and Spend

There really isn't that much difference in how they act these days. True Republican versus true Democrat fiscal ideals are vastly different. These days the Republicans seem willing to spend, they just don't want to have to come up with the money for it.

Well said. I do not see fiscal conservation in congress anymore. The republicans are just as guilty for big government as the democrats now.

=====

Re: RICH LOWRY: Will GOP commit

Posted by Big BM - 2007/12/18 17:06

gopherus wrote:

dailyherald wrote:

The ghost of Howard Dean haunts the pundit class. As soon as a candidate of either party spikes up in the polls, he is compared with Dean, who had a spectacular boomlet in the second half of 2003 only to deflate as soon as people began to vote in early 2004.

Read more...

If you've got a sack full of douche-bags and you reach in and grab something you're going to get a douche-bag. That's all the Republicans can do this time around.

Have you looked at that sack of Democrats? I'd hate to say what you'd pull out if you reached in that bag!

=====

Re: RICH LOWRY: Will GOP commit

Posted by gopherus - 2007/12/18 18:47

Big BM wrote:

gopherus wrote:

dailyherald wrote:

The ghost of Howard Dean haunts the pundit class. As soon as a candidate of either party spikes up in the polls, he is compared with Dean, who had a spectacular boomlet in the second half of 2003 only to deflate as soon as people began to vote in early 2004.

Read more...

If you've got a sack full of douche-bags and you reach in and grab something you're going to get a douche-bag. That's all the Republicans can do this time around.

Have you looked at that sack of Democrats? I'd hate to say what you'd pull out if you reached in that bag!

There are more in that sack that recognize that unnecessary wars cost a lot of money. That's something (and the sooner the Dems figure out that Hillary isn't one of them the better of they will be).

=====

Re: RICH LOWRY: Will GOP commit

Posted by mariner - 2007/12/20 14:46

gopherus wrote:

Big BM wrote:

gopherus wrote:

dailyherald wrote:

The ghost of Howard Dean haunts the pundit class. As soon as a candidate of either party spikes up in the polls, he is compared with Dean, who had a spectacular boomlet in the second half of 2003 only to deflate as soon as people began to vote in early 2004.

Read more...

If you've got a sack full of douche-bags and you reach in and grab something you're going to get a douche-bag. That's all the Republicans can do this time around.

Have you looked at that sack of Democrats? I'd hate to say what you'd pull out if you reached in that bag!

There are more in that sack that recognize that unnecessary wars cost a lot of money. That's something (and the sooner the Dems figure out that Hillary isn't one of them the better of they will be).

I wish that they knew that unnecessary wars cost... but they only know that making noise about unpopular wars wins votes. In either case, the war will not end because strategically both parties are relying on the war to win an election. Sounds like a bag of slime on either account.

=====

Re: RICH LOWRY: Will GOP commit

Posted by gopherus - 2007/12/20 15:03

Mariner wrote:

gopherus wrote:

Big BM wrote:

gopherus wrote:

dailyherald wrote:

The ghost of Howard Dean haunts the pundit class. As soon as a candidate of either party spikes up in the polls, he is compared with Dean, who had a spectacular boomlet in the second half of 2003 only to deflate as soon as people began to vote in early 2004.

Read more...

If you've got a sack full of douche-bags and you reach in and grab something you're going to get a douche-bag. That's all the Republicans can do this time around.

Have you looked at that sack of Democrats? I'd hate to say what you'd pull out if you reached in that bag!

There are more in that sack that recognize that unnecessary wars cost a lot of money. That's something (and the sooner the Dems figure out that Hillary isn't one of them the better of they will be). I wish that they knew that unnecessary wars cost... but they only know that making noise about unpopular wars wins votes. In either case, the war will not end because strategically both parties are relying on the war to win an election. Sounds like a bag of slime on either account.

The Dems would let it end now. They can still use it to their benefit. All it would take is for Bush to make it so and that's not going to happen. You can call Obama many things but he doesn't fit your description of bag of slime on this issue.

=====

Re: RICH LOWRY: Will GOP commit

Posted by ericmiami - 2008/05/07 04:03

God bless the good folks of Indiana and North Carolina. The witch is dead. Bill's swing through the rural areas fooled no one apparently, with his phony folksiness. I'll be sending Sen. Obama some more money today, and may send it in StupidReader's name.

=====