
Judge erred

Posted by dailyherald - 2007/12/17 00:07

The judge in Idaho whoripped baby Harvey out of the arms of his loving adoptivemom and dad in American Fork ought to be ashamed. The emotional trauma to the baby of taking him from his adoptive mother,to whom he has now bonded,will be long lasting and perhaps permanent.

Read more...

=====

Re: Judge erred

Posted by JLD - 2007/12/17 11:11

As long as the child is his son he should have the right to raise him.

=====

Re: Judge erred

Posted by Wren - 2008/01/24 07:41

If the father is committed to his child's welfare, the "emotional trauma" will be mitigated.

A child belongs with its parent.

=====

Re: Judge erred

Posted by highlandmom - 2008/01/30 11:24

Wren wrote:

A child belongs with its parent.

Who is the true parent here, the dude that knocked up his girl friend, gave her no financial or emotional support and didn't file the required paperwork until the child was a month old or the people who have nurtured the child since his birth? If the sperm donor wanted to be a Dad he should have done something about much sooner. Marriage prior to sexual activity prevents this type of problem.

=====

Re: Judge erred

Posted by Wren - 2008/05/21 07:52

highlandmom wrote:

Wren wrote:

A child belongs with its parent.

Who is the true parent here, the dude that knocked up his girl friend, gave her no financial or emotional support and didn't file the required paperwork until the child was a month old or the people who have nurtured the child since his birth? If the sperm donor wanted to be a Dad he should have done something about much sooner. Marriage prior to sexual activity prevents this type of problem.

highlandmom, you are wrong, period.

Your question is skewed, and you know it.

I have three of my own. When did the father know that he was a father? Was he immediately given the opportunity to shoulder his duties? How do we know that the father's parents won't be anything but outstanding nurturers and supporters of this little family?

Shame on you, highlandmom.

And shame on the LDS Social Services who have pulled these types of shenanigans repeatedly. I agree with HM that the agency must pay attorney's fees and foot the bill for a new adoption for the grieving adoptive mother.

=====

Re: Judge erred

Posted by utocoman - 2008/05/21 08:32

highlandmom wrote:

Wren wrote:

A child belongs with its parent.

Who is the true parent here, the dude that knocked up his girl friend, gave her no financial or emotional support and didn't file the required paperwork until the child was a month old or the people who have nurtured the child since his birth? If the sperm donor wanted to be a Dad he should have done something about much sooner. Marriage prior to sexual activity prevents this type of problem.

sssssssh ...so does birth control

=====