Obama wins N.C., trails in close Indiana contest

This thread discusses the Content article: Obama wins N.C., trails in close Indiana contest

A two point win for Clinton in Indiana, a state in which "The Limbaugh Effect" was operating. You know about the Limbaugh Effect, don't you? Old Lardo extolling his followers to vote for Clinton in the Democratic primaries to create chaos. In some states who have open primaries, like Indiana, it's a simple thing to do. Any Republican who wants too can vote. In others with closed primaries, they have to temporarily switch parties to do it, which has caused some problems in some states as those who switched could not then vote in closely contested state Republican primaries in those states. Ooops. :laugh:

Now why, you ask, would Limbaugh be extolling his followers to vote for Clinton, and why would right wing Republican publishers like Pittsburgh Tribune-Review owner and publisher, billionaire Richard Mellon Scaife (a big winner in the Bush tax plan) further extol his readers to vote for Clinton? Chaos is not the reason. So what is the reason? The same reason that our very own RushReader continues the rumor and innuendo parade against Obama.

They would rather face Clinton in November. They deem that match up as being more winnable. In other words, fear for their candidate, "John McBush". Is Obama electable? The actions of the Republican media and bloggers says "YES" in a big, big way...that's why they are so scared of him.

Too funny. :laugh:

Bring on Earbama!!!! He will have his ass handed to him by McCain in the fall debates. You get this elitist muslim black guy up on the stage who hasn't done ()*^%@$% his entire life and pit him against a POW war hero, with years of experience in the Senate.

The only folks cheering for Earbama to win in Osama bin Laden who is just waiting to nuke us once his "Brother" goes to 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue.

That's funny. :laugh: Somebody who is not shackled by the bungling of Bush and has a command of the English language (Obama) versus John "McBush" McCain, the guy who says we could be in Iraq for 100 years, and who recently said Iran (a Shiite country) was supplying and training al Qaeda (Sunni's). Not quite.

John McCain...Mr. Excitement himself. One wonders if senility is setting in. And then we have his temper, which is well known. I can't wait for Obama to push a button or two and get him to "loose it" live on national TV. Yes, I am looking forward to those debates. :laugh:

And McCain has indeed done a lot in the Senate. The thing I remember most was his role in the S&L scandal of the 80's, and he was not involved in a good way.

The Lincoln Savings led to the Keating Five political scandal, in which five U.S. senators were implicated in an influence-peddling scheme. It was named for Charles Keating, who headed Lincoln saving and made $300,000 as political contributions to them in the 1980s. Three of those senators - Alan Cranston, Don Riegle, and Dennis DeConcini - found their political careers cut short as a result. Two others - John Glenn and John McCain - were rebuked by the Senate Ethics Committee for exercising "poor judgment" for intervening with the federal regulators on behalf of Keating. John McCain is a Republican candidate in the 2008 U.S. presidential election.

He sure had the best interests of Americans in his mind there, didn't he Ray? And why do you keep saying Obama is Muslim? He isn't and never has been. Do you think lying will work? ;)

McCain's "years of experience in the Senate" consists of voting like a Democrat!

But I'm sure McCain will be a big hit at the annual conference of the National Council of La Raza (The Race), in San Diego on July 14, 2008, the extreme Hispanic lobby group that advocates a militant "reconquista" of the Southwestern United States.

<http://www.johnmccain.com/Informing/News/PressReleases/6dfbbff2-9e17-4dd1-b2a1-87e4287e69fb.htm>

McCain, favored by La Raza (The Race) due to his previous calls for a total amnesty on illegal immigrants in the U.S. and sustained opposition to efforts to strengthen controls at the U.S.-Mexican border, will repeat the appearance he made at the 2004 National Council of La Raza in Phoenix, Arizona where he made a keynote address.

<http://www.nclr.org/content/news/detail/2649/>

They call for the implementation of The Plan of San Diego, a plot hatched in 1915 in Northern Mexico and throughout the Southwest that called for the genocide of all white males over 16.

<http://www.mexica-movement.org/>

The founder of La Raza (The Race) and professor at University of Texas, Arlington, Jose Angel Gutierrez, is on record as saying "We have got to eliminate the gringo, and what I mean by that is if the worst comes to the worst, we have got to kill him."

Of course, if you disagree with McCain's courtship of "The Race", you can always vote for Obama.

Sorry but the fact that McSame was only good at crashing jets and being captured are not positives!

He will lose to any Democrat.

If you thought Clinton had wandering eyes look at McSame's wife. He will disgrace his wife many more times (probably already has) than Clinton.

Sorry but I have no plans to nuke DC so there goes that feeble argument! What a NeoCon Rush listening loser you must be!

Limbaugh?

Is he still on the radio?

I thought after his numerous felonious acts of prescription fraud and illegal drug possession and use he would have lost his audience?

If not, are his listeners from the same stock? I think so!!!! After all they are as disillusioned as he.

You deride a dedicated Navy pilot and prop up a black commie terrorist muslim sympathizer like the Great Obama? What sort of rock do you live under? McCain gave 5 years of his life living in a stinking ^%$#@& hole and was tortured for it. Obama sat on the corners of Chicago with a crack pipe. McCain has been a great conservative senator. Obama "God D*** America" has been running for Pres from the day he was sworn in after being elected by those other crack pipe using Chicago welfare mommas.

The people will see those to on the debate stage and say, "McCain is the man to lead us to defeat AQ in Iraq. Obama is a slick sounding used Cadillac car salesman."

End of story. Did you notice the stock market went down 200 points the day after Obama's "victory"? Wall Street knows what this commie terrorist lover will do to the American economy. Wake up.

Wow! Sounds like you've been listening to Sean Hannity too much! McCain is a military hero, but if he is elected then we'll have at least four more years of the same BS we have now in the white house. I don't know if Obama is the best choice, but he sure as hell can't be as bad and corrupt as Bush and Cheney!

How is McCain anymore of a hero than Obama? McCain--a privileged white son of a 4 star admiral--did serve his country and should be respected for that. Obama has served his country too, working for civil rights, breaking racial barriers that have stained our nation for too long. Whether it is breaking barriers at elitist institutions like Harvard--which he did--or becoming the first black candidate with a real shot at being President, he is serving his country by leading a movement of progression long overdue. McCain did serve in a war that should have never been fought--which is a form of patriotism to some--but the conscientious objector was being just as patriotic by refusing to go kill people for no good reason. There are many different types of heros, not just veterans and POW's, but people that do good things for this country in many ways, like Obama.

I don't think Rush had any effect on this primary, or much else for that matter. Nor do I think in the open primaries that you would find either party doing much of this "switching". Certainly to not any degree that would have any effect. Voters are apathetic enough. Just getting them to the polls in the general election is difficult enough.

Besides isn't Hillary's case that she is more "winnable" than Obama? Everyboby can't be more winnable. Of course this is politics, where anything is possible. ;)

Who have we been fighting in Iraq if not the muslims, brother? Quakers? Baptists, Hindus? All of them are followers of Islam in Iraq and we've been killing them for the killing they did on 9/11 and the USS Cole and the WTC in '93 and Beirut and for all the attacks on Israel and for the invasion of Kuwait. All of it. There is a battle between the Civilizations of Christ and the Civilizations of Allah.

What side do you want to be on?

Wake up, use your brain, see what is happening. Do you want your granddaughter married to some Pakistani rug merchant, wearing a viel? Do you want your grandson to have to walk by a mosque (with its blaring PA system calling ALL to prayer) everyday while going to work?

This is the future of America if you don't act now and support what we're doing in Iraq.

Actually, is is not so much us fighting them as it is them fighting each other, with us (as in U.S.) in the middle. We are policing a civil war...did you not get the memo, Ray? Perhaps Bush did not tell you, being as he only recently figured it out. :laugh:

And we are not fighting Muslims, we are fighting extremists and insurgents who happen to be Muslim. Big difference. By your warped logic, we were fighting "Christians" in WW1 and WW2, as the Germans and Italians were, you guessed it, predominantly Christian. Don't you just hate it when your foolishness is revealed for all to see, Ray? ;)

Neither one of the Democrats would make a good pimple on John McCains AZZ!!

In separate phone interviews, Bradley Whitford and Richard Schiff -- both of whom starred in the television political drama "The West Wing" -- said the senator made the remarks after he spoke at length about his reservations about Bush becoming president. Liberal blogger Arianna Huffington first wrote about the incident Monday, asserting neither McCain nor his wife Cindy backed Bush in his first presidential bid, and the Los Angeles Times reported Wednesday that a woman who was also at the dinner confirmed Huffington's account, though she declined to give her name. ...

"He was going on and on about how horribly unqualified and untested Bush was, how the campaign had attacked his family," said Whitford, a registered Democrat. "Someone said, 'If he's so terrible, why did you support him?'"

McCain replied that as a member of the GOP, Whitford added, he always intended to back the party's nominee. Then, the actor said, someone asked McCain whether he had cast a vote in favor of Bush.

"He put his finger up to his lips, shook his head and mouthed, 'No way,'" Whitford said.

The Los Angeles Times talked to another source from the party on Wednesday that also corroborated Arianna's account:

Another woman who attended the 2001 dinner said Tuesday that Cindy McCain had told her she could not bring herself to vote for Bush. The source said she did not want to be identified, so as not to alienate the McCains.

Raymond, you are a nutjob, dude! Are you afraid to go outside? Come on man, not all muslims are the enemy here. Truth is, I'm much more afraid of our corrupt government in this country than I am of the muslim community. Ray, I have to deal with people that have some mental issues and I usually refer them to a therapist. So I am telling you that perhaps you might want to seek help yourself. I have often wondered why people who are extreme conservatives tend to be like you are. I'm not really a stanch liberal, but I like to see things from different angles, you know, have an open mind. Again Ray, SEEK HELP! Do it for your family if need be, but just do it!

Why don't you worry about why you choose to live in a nation that you clearly hate. Not all muslims are they enemy? Tell me the last time you heard of a non-muslim terrorist.

Terry McAullife? Or have I stepped on the toes of one of your heroes, Raymond?
