
McCain Credit Card Debt

Posted by truthhurts - 2008/06/16 17:50

Well, I suppose John McCain has one thing in common with the average American...too much credit card debt. Not a good example, by any stretch of the imagination. I guess when he said the following:

"I'm going to be honest. I know a lot less about economics than I do about military and foreign policy issues. I still need to be educated." 11/26/05

"The issue of economics is not something I've understood as well as I should. I've got Greenspan's book." -12/18/07

he wasn't kidding. :laugh: With the economy now being the number one issue, it surprises me that anyone would want him as President. Well, except for those who love big budget deficits and continued tax cuts for the rich, of course. And war. ;)

Sen. John McCain (R-Ariz.) and his wife reported more than $100,000 of credit card liabilities, according to financial disclosure documents released Friday.

The presidential candidate and his wife Cindy reported piling up debt on a charge card between $10,000 and $15,000. His wife's solo charge card has between $100,000 and $250,000 in debt to American Express.

McCain's wife also has a second American Express charge card listed on the senator's financial disclosure that was carrying $100'000 to $250,000 in debt.

Another charge card with American Express, this one for a "dependent child," is carrying debt in the range of $15,000 and $50,000.

Cindy McCain reported a wealth of assets, including properties in Arizona and one she sold in La Jolla, Calif. for more than $1 million in profit.

In addition to his Senate salary, McCain received an annual pension from the U.S. Navy that is worth more than $58,000.

Democratic candidate, Sen. Barack Obama (D-Ill.), reported no liabilities in his annual financial disclosures....

McCain Credit Card Debt

=====

Re:McCain Credit Card Debt

Posted by Sir John the Apostate - 2008/06/16 17:58

truthhurts wrote:

Well, I suppose John McCain has one thing in common with the average American...too much credit card debt. Not a good example, by any stretch of the imagination. I guess when he said the following:

"I'm going to be honest. I know a lot less about economics than I do about military and foreign policy issues. I still need to be educated." 11/26/05

"The issue of economics is not something I've understood as well as I should. I've got Greenspan's book." -12/18/07

he wasn't kidding. :laugh: With the economy now being the number one issue, it surprises me that anyone would want him as President. Well, except for those who love big budget deficits and continued tax cuts for the rich, of course. And war. ;)

Sen. John McCain (R-Ariz.) and his wife reported more than $100,000 of credit card liabilities, according to financial disclosure documents released Friday.

The presidential candidate and his wife Cindy reported piling up debt on a charge card between $10,000 and $15,000. His wife's solo charge card has between $100,000 and $250,000 in debt to American Express.

McCain's wife also has a second American Express charge card listed on the senator's financial disclosure that was carrying $100'000 to $250,000 in debt.

Another charge card with American Express, this one for a "dependent child," is carrying debt in the range of $15,000 and $50,000.

Cindy McCain reported a wealth of assets, including properties in Arizona and one she sold in La Jolla, Calif. for more than $1 million in profit.

In addition to his Senate salary, McCain received an annual pension from the U.S. Navy that is worth more than $58,000.

Democratic candidate, Sen. Barack Obama (D-Ill.), reported no liabilities in his annual financial disclosures....

McCain Credit Card Debt

Yes sir we got us a true blue Republican here!!!

:woohoo:

=====

Re:McCain Credit Card Debt

Posted by Everybody Loves Raymond - 2008/06/24 12:52

His debt will be repaid gladly by True Americans who honor what he did in the POW camps for America.

The real debt to be worried about is the debt the Messiah Obama will get us into by handouts to welfare mommas and the deals he'll cut with the Mullahs of Tehran.

=====

Re:McCain Credit Card Debt

Posted by Sir John the Apostate - 2008/06/24 14:12

Everybody Loves Raymond wrote:

His debt will be repaid gladly by True Americans who honor what he did in the POW camps for America.

The real debt to be worried about is the debt the Messiah Obama will get us into by handouts to welfare mommas and the deals he'll cut with the Mullahs of Tehran.

Oh your always such a "Ray" of sunshine. http://www.heraldextra.com/images/fbfiles/images/Big_Smile-d06ce383df71103142dc171eb730cc9f.gif

=====

Re:McCain Credit Card Debt

Posted by JLD - 2008/06/24 14:15

truthhurts wrote:

Well, I suppose John McCain has one thing in common with the average American...too much credit card debt. Not a good example, by any stretch of the imagination. I guess when he said the following:

'I'm going to be honest. I know a lot less about economics than I do about military and foreign policy issues. I still need to be educated.' 11/26/05

"The issue of economics is not something I've understood as well as I should. I've got Greenspan's book." -12/18/07

he wasn't kidding. :laugh: With the economy now being the number one issue, it surprises me that anyone would want him as President. Well, except for those who love big budget deficits and continued tax cuts for the rich, of course. And war. ;)

Sen. John McCain (R-Ariz.) and his wife reported more than $100,000 of credit card liabilities, according to financial disclosure documents released Friday.

The presidential candidate and his wife Cindy reported piling up debt on a charge card between $10,000 and $15,000.

His wife's solo charge card has between $100,000 and $250,000 in debt to American Express.

McCain's wife also has a second American Express charge card listed on the senator's financial disclosure that was carrying $100'000 to $250,000 in debt.

Another charge card with American Express, this one for a "dependent child," is carrying debt in the range of $15,000 and $50,000.

Cindy McCain reported a wealth of assets, including properties in Arizona and one she sold in La Jolla, Calif. for more than $1 million in profit.

In addition to his Senate salary, McCain received an annual pension from the U.S. Navy that is worth more than $58,000.

Democratic candidate, Sen. Barack Obama (D-Ill.), reported no liabilities in his annual financial disclosures....

McCain Credit Card Debt

So he is just like the majority of Americans in that he carries credit card debt...what difference does that make?

=====

Re:McCain Credit Card Debt

Posted by xs6 - 2008/07/10 00:33

JLD wrote:

truthhurts wrote:

Well, I suppose John McCain has one thing in common with the average American...too much credit card debt. Not a good example, by any stretch of the imagination. I guess when he said the following:

"I'm going to be honest. I know a lot less about economics than I do about military and foreign policy issues. I still need to be educated." 11/26/05

"The issue of economics is not something I've understood as well as I should. I've got Greenspan's book." -12/18/07

he wasn't kidding. :laugh: With the economy now being the number one issue, it surprises me that anyone would want him as President. Well, except for those who love big budget deficits and continued tax cuts for the rich, of course. And war. ;)

Sen. John McCain (R-Ariz.) and his wife reported more than $100,000 of credit card liabilities, according to financial disclosure documents released Friday.

The presidential candidate and his wife Cindy reported piling up debt on a charge card between $10,000 and $15,000. His wife's solo charge card has between $100,000 and $250,000 in debt to American Express.

McCain's wife also has a second American Express charge card listed on the senator's financial disclosure that was carrying $100'000 to $250,000 in debt.

Another charge card with American Express, this one for a "dependent child," is carrying debt in the range of $15,000 and $50,000.

Cindy McCain reported a wealth of assets, including properties in Arizona and one she sold in La Jolla, Calif. for more than $1 million in profit.

In addition to his Senate salary, McCain received an annual pension from the U.S. Navy that is worth more than $58,000.

Democratic candidate, Sen. Barack Obama (D-Ill.), reported no liabilities in his annual financial disclosures....

McCain Credit Card Debt

So he is just like the majority of Americans in that he carries credit card debt...what difference does that make?

I think he is about to lead the Americans and he should set good examples for us. and as McCain Himself claims that he knows little about Economy, so He is not a right Man for America.

Thanks.

Credit Card Debt

=====

Re:McCain Credit Card Debt

Posted by ericmiami - 2008/07/10 05:41

I'd probably vote for McCain if Cindy promised to put the deficit on her credit cards. Oh, and the cost of the war too. And research on alternative energy sources.

=====