
Veracity backs out because iProvo sale didn't close as scheduled

Posted by Antispin - 2008/07/05 08:27

This thread discusses the Content article: Veracity backs out because iProvo sale didn't close as scheduled

This is a very serious threat to the Broadweave attempt to assume the iProvo project. Veracity technical expertise was essential since Provo has dumped most of it's technical staff.

What is worse is that now Broadweave has the keys to a car it can't afford, can't operate, and expects to share with certain friends on a very loose basis. Of course one of the first things this "adolescent" company wants to do is start removing factory provided parts and installing ones they like better. Of course they have no idea where they will get the gas or parts money. I've seen a few teenagers take this path, but a company walking away with a $58 million car owned by Provo taxpayers is too much to believe. Seriously, Mayor Billings, Provo Council, you need to stop this mess before the car is totaled. Maybe it's already too late? Provo needs adult supervision!

=====