
Chrysler plans to cut 1,000 salaried jobs

Posted by Everybody Loves Raymond - 2008/07/23 17:59

This thread discusses the Content article: Chrysler plans to cut 1,000 salaried jobs

All because so called Americans think it is cool to buy a German or Japanese auto instead of supporting the American worker.

=====

Re:Chrysler plans to cut 1,000 salaried jobs

Posted by Betzz - 2008/07/24 10:51

Everybody Loves Raymond wrote:

This thread discusses the Content article: Chrysler plans to cut 1,000 salaried jobs

All because so called Americans think it is cool to buy a German or Japanese auto instead of supporting the American worker.

My Toyota was built by an American worker in Indiana . . .

=====

Re:Chrysler plans to cut 1,000 salaried jobs

Posted by unaffiliated_person - 2008/07/24 10:57

Everybody Loves Raymond wrote:

This thread discusses the Content article: Chrysler plans to cut 1,000 salaried jobs

All because so called Americans think it is cool to buy a German or Japanese auto instead of supporting the American worker.

You do realize many "American" cars are made in Mexico and Canada, whereas Honda, Nissan, and Toyota all maintain factories here in the US right? In fact, the Toyota Tundra pickup is made in Texas, and by buying one, you are providing jobs for Americans. However, Venezuela makes Ford Explorers, and Mexico makes Ford Fusions.

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/List_of_Ford_factories

=====

Re:Chrysler plans to cut 1,000 salaried jobs

Posted by woody - 2008/07/24 11:13

unaffiliated_person wrote:

Everybody Loves Raymond wrote:

This thread discusses the Content article: Chrysler plans to cut 1,000 salaried jobs

All because so called Americans think it is cool to buy a German or Japanese auto instead of supporting the American worker.

You do realize many "American" cars are made in Mexico and Canada, whereas Honda, Nissan, and Toyota all maintain factories here in the US right? In fact, the Toyota Tundra pickup is made in Texas, and by buying one, you are providing jobs for Americans. However, Venezuela makes Ford Explorers, and Mexico makes Ford Fusions.

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/List_of_Ford_factories

When Keeper gets out of jail he is going to have a hayday with this comment...

=====

Re:Chrysler plans to cut 1,000 salaried jobs

Posted by unaffiliated_person - 2008/07/24 13:58

woody wrote:

unaffiliated_person wrote:

Everybody Loves Raymond wrote:

This thread discusses the Content article: Chrysler plans to cut 1,000 salaried jobs

All because so called Americans think it is cool to buy a German or Japanese auto instead of supporting the American worker.

You do realize many "American" cars are made in Mexico and Canada, whereas Honda, Nissan, and Toyota all maintain factories here in the US right? In fact, the Toyota Tundra pickup is made in Texas, and by buying one, you are providing jobs for Americans. However, Venezuela makes Ford Explorers, and Mexico makes Ford Fusions.

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/List_of_Ford_factories

When Keeper gets out of jail he is going to have a hayday with this comment...

What is interesting is that the Japanese car companies are doing fine without unions too here in the US. The UAW approached the workers at the factories, but were not warmly received. They provide great pay and benefits, while GM and Ford are trimming everything.

The Prius is build in Mississippi, and the Focus in Mexico. There are plenty of examples like that.

Re:Chrysler plans to cut 1,000 salaried jobs

Posted by Everybody Loves Raymond - 2008/07/24 19:55

unaffiliated_person wrote:

The Prius is build in Mississippi, and the Focus in Mexico. There are plenty of examples like that.

Wrong yet again. The Prius won't be built in Mississippi until 2010. All Prius now are built in the Land of the Rising Sun.

Re:Chrysler plans to cut 1,000 salaried jobs

Posted by Just Reading - 2008/07/24 20:55

Everybody Loves Raymond wrote:

unaffiliated_person wrote:

The Prius is build in Mississippi, and the Focus in Mexico. There are plenty of examples like that.

Wrong yet again. The Prius won't be built in Mississippi until 2010. All Prius now are built in the Land of the Rising Sun.

"LOL" and your point Dubbs!! oh I mean Raymond...

Re:Chrysler plans to cut 1,000 salaried jobs

Posted by Betzz - 2008/07/24 21:05

Just Reading wrote:

Everybody Loves Raymond wrote:

unaffiliated_person wrote:

The Prius is build in Mississippi, and the Focus in Mexico. There are plenty of examples like that.

Wrong yet again. The Prius won't be built in Mississippi until 2010. All Prius now are built in the Land of the Rising Sun.

"LOL" and your point Dubbs!! oh I mean Raymond...

I noticed he conveniently sidestepped the fact that a lot of Fords are made in Mexico.

=====

Re:Chrysler plans to cut 1,000 salaried jobs

Posted by Blondie - 2008/07/24 23:16

Betzz wrote:

Just Reading wrote:

Everybody Loves Raymond wrote:

unaffiliated_person wrote:

The Prius is build in Mississippi, and the Focus in Mexico. There are plenty of examples like that.

Wrong yet again. The Prius won't be built in Mississippi until 2010. All Prius now are built in the Land of the Rising Sun.

"LOL" and your point Dubbs!! oh I mean Raymond...

I noticed he conveniently sidestepped the fact that a lot of Fords are made in Mexico.

I guess that is the reason i cannot get a part for my Taurus... They are taking a fiesta nap.....;)

=====

Re:Chrysler plans to cut 1,000 salaried jobs

Posted by Everybody Loves Raymond - 2008/07/25 08:31

Just Reading wrote:

Everybody Loves Raymond wrote:

unaffiliated_person wrote:

The Prius is build in Mississippi, and the Focus in Mexico. There are plenty of examples like that.

Wrong yet again. The Prius won't be built in Mississippi until 2010. All Prius now are built in the Land of the Rising Sun.

"LOL" and your point Dubbs!! oh I mean Raymond...

The point is he is wrong. Then again most Libs never know they are wrong.

=====

Re:Chrysler plans to cut 1,000 salaried jobs

Posted by unaffiliated_person - 2008/07/25 08:37

Everybody Loves Raymond wrote:

unaffiliated_person wrote:

The Prius is build in Mississippi, and the Focus in Mexico. There are plenty of examples like that.

Wrong yet again. The Prius won't be built in Mississippi until 2010. All Prius now are built in the Land of the Rising Sun.

You are correct. They only make the Camry, Avalon, Sienna, Tundra, Sequoia, and Solara here. The Prius and Highlander will be made in MS as soon as the factory is finished.

Re:Chrysler plans to cut 1,000 salaried jobs

Posted by utocoman - 2008/07/25 08:43

Everybody Loves Raymond wrote:

This thread discusses the Content article: Chrysler plans to cut 1,000 salaried jobs

All because so called Americans think it is cool to buy a German or Japanese auto instead of supporting the American worker.

Rayboy is wrong again! My BMW Z3 was built in Ohio.

Re:Chrysler plans to cut 1,000 salaried jobs

Posted by utocoman - 2008/07/25 08:45

woody wrote:

unaffiliated_person wrote:

Everybody Loves Raymond wrote:

This thread discusses the Content article: Chrysler plans to cut 1,000 salaried jobs

All because so called Americans think it is cool to buy a German or Japanese auto instead of supporting the American worker.

You do realize many "American" cars are made in Mexico and Canada, whereas Honda, Nissan, and Toyota all maintain factories here in the US right? In fact, the Toyota Tundra pickup is made in Texas, and by buying one, you are providing jobs for Americans. However, Venezuela makes Ford Explorers, and Mexico makes Ford Fusions.

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/List_of_Ford_factories

When Keeper gets out of jail he is going to have a hayday with this comment...

Did you and your celly have a long conversation after count and "lights out" Woodman?

Re:Chrysler plans to cut 1,000 salaried jobs

Posted by woody - 2008/07/25 09:42

utocoman wrote:

woody wrote:

unaffiliated_person wrote:

Everybody Loves Raymond wrote:

This thread discusses the Content article: Chrysler plans to cut 1,000 salaried jobs

All because so called Americans think it is cool to buy a German or Japanese auto instead of supporting the American worker.

You do realize many "American" cars are made in Mexico and Canada, whereas Honda, Nissan, and Toyota all maintain factories here in the US right? In fact, the Toyota Tundra pickup is made in Texas, and by buying one, you are providing jobs for Americans. However, Venezuela makes Ford Explorers, and Mexico makes Ford Fusions.

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/List_of_Ford_factories

When Keeper gets out of jail he is going to have a hayday with this comment...

Did you and your celly have a long conversation after count and "lights out" Woodman?

Oh, conman your hate clouds your mind and keeps you from having a normal conversation...

Re:Chrysler plans to cut 1,000 salaried jobs

Posted by eric hussein miami - 2008/07/25 10:08

Maybe Raymond's Yugo will break down on his way to the polls and his vote won't count.

Re:Chrysler plans to cut 1,000 salaried jobs

Posted by Everybody Loves Raymond - 2008/07/25 10:21

eric hussein miami wrote:

Maybe Raymond's Yugo will break down on his way to the polls and his vote won't count.

I don't own Euro-trash. I drive a Town Car.

Re:Chrysler plans to cut 1,000 salaried jobs

Posted by Betzz - 2008/07/25 10:39

Everybody Loves Raymond wrote:

eric hussein miami wrote:

Maybe Raymond's Yugo will break down on his way to the polls and his vote won't count.

I don't own Euro-trash. I drive a Town Car.

One of the new Town Cars that was built in Canada? :laugh:

Re:Chrysler plans to cut 1,000 salaried jobs

Posted by Everybody Loves Raymond - 2008/07/25 11:30

Betzz wrote:

Everybody Loves Raymond wrote:

eric hussein miami wrote:

Maybe Raymond's Yugo will break down on his way to the polls and his vote won't count.

I don't own Euro-trash. I drive a Town Car.

One of the new Town Cars that was built in Canada? :laugh:

I have an '06 built in Michigan, ass.

=====

Re:Chrysler plans to cut 1,000 salaried jobs

Posted by Betzz - 2008/07/25 11:40

Everybody Loves Raymond wrote:

Betzz wrote:

Everybody Loves Raymond wrote:

eric hussein miami wrote:

Maybe Raymond's Yugo will break down on his way to the polls and his vote won't count.

I don't own Euro-trash. I drive a Town Car.

One of the new Town Cars that was built in Canada? :laugh:

I have an '06 built in Michigan, ass.

ohhhh, did I hit a nerve? :laugh:

=====

Re:Chrysler plans to cut 1,000 salaried jobs

Posted by unaffiliated_person - 2008/07/25 12:01

Betzz wrote:

Everybody Loves Raymond wrote:

eric hussein miami wrote:

Maybe Raymond's Yugo will break down on his way to the polls and his vote won't count.

I don't own Euro-trash. I drive a Town Car.

One of the new Town Cars that was built in Canada? :laugh:

Good research. Any Town Car after 06 will be built in Ontario Canada. I assume that means parts as well.

=====

Re:Chrysler plans to cut 1,000 salaried jobs

Posted by Betzz - 2008/07/25 12:12

unaffiliated_person wrote:

Betzz wrote:

Everybody Loves Raymond wrote:

eric hussein miami wrote:

Maybe Raymond's Yugo will break down on his way to the polls and his vote won't count.

I don't own Euro-trash. I drive a Town Car.

One of the new Town Cars that was built in Canada? :laugh:

Good research. Any Town Car after 06 will be built in Ontario Canada. I assume that means parts as well.

And how very convenient that Raytroll has an '06 Town Car, don't you think? :huh: :laugh:

=====

Re:Chrysler plans to cut 1,000 salaried jobs

Posted by eric hussein miami - 2008/07/25 17:58

Ray has the back of the Town Car cut out and a Mazda pickup bed installed there. Look for it and wave hello to him!

=====

Re:Chrysler plans to cut 1,000 salaried jobs

Posted by Everybody Loves Raymond - 2008/07/25 18:11

Betzz wrote:

unaffiliated_person wrote:

Betzz wrote:

Everybody Loves Raymond wrote:

eric hussein miami wrote:

Maybe Raymond's Yugo will break down on his way to the polls and his vote won't count.

I don't own Euro-trash. I drive a Town Car.

One of the new Town Cars that was built in Canada? :laugh:

Good research. Any Town Car after 06 will be built in Ontario Canada. I assume that means parts as well.

And how very convenient that Raytroll has an '06 Town Car, don't you think? :huh: :laugh:

Jealous? Bet you drive some German crapolla that cost as much as my TC and has 1/4 the room and comfort.

=====

Re:Chrysler plans to cut 1,000 salaried jobs

Posted by Betzz - 2008/07/25 18:20

Everybody Loves Raymond wrote:

Betzz wrote:

unaffiliated_person wrote:

Betzz wrote:

Everybody Loves Raymond wrote:

eric hussein miami wrote:

Maybe Raymond's Yugo will break down on his way to the polls and his vote won't count.

I don't own Euro-trash. I drive a Town Car.

One of the new Town Cars that was built in Canada? :laugh:

Good research. Any Town Car after 06 will be built in Ontario Canada. I assume that means parts as well.

And how very convenient that Raytroll has an '06 Town Car, don't you think? :huh: :laugh:

Jealous? Bet you drive some German crapolla that cost as much as my TC and has 1/4 the room and comfort.

No, I drive a Toyota Tundra quad cab that was built in Indiana. I laugh at people like you who whine about people buying foreign cars, while I sit at a train crossing watching all the Fords that are coming straight out of Mexico.

=====

Re:Chrysler plans to cut 1,000 salaried jobs

Posted by Just Reading - 2008/07/25 19:03

Everybody Loves Raymond wrote:
Betzz wrote:
unaffiliated_person wrote:
Betzz wrote:
Everybody Loves Raymond wrote:
eric hussein miami wrote:
Maybe Raymond's Yugo will break down on his way to the polls and his vote won't count.

I don't own Euro-trash. I drive a Town Car.

One of the new Town Cars that was built in Canada? :laugh:

Good research. Any Town Car after 06 will be built in Ontario Canada. I assume that means parts as well.

And how very convenient that Raytroll has an '06 Town Car, don't you think? :huh: :laugh:

Jealous? Bet you drive some German crapolla that cost as much as my TC and has 1/4 the room and comfort.
"LOL" a Lincoln Town Car "LOL"
THE CAR THAT WISHES IT WAS A CADILLAC...!!!:woohoo: :woohoo:

=====

Re:Chrysler plans to cut 1,000 salaried jobs

Posted by Everybody Loves Raymond - 2008/07/25 23:44

Should have known you drive a Turdota. Yeah, built in Indiana and every yen in profit goes to the masters in Tokyo.
Hope you are happy with yourself.

Could have bought a F150 and put some Americans to work, but no . . .

=====

Re:Chrysler plans to cut 1,000 salaried jobs

Posted by Everybody Loves Raymond - 2008/07/25 23:47

Just Reading wrote:
Everybody Loves Raymond wrote:
Betzz wrote:
unaffiliated_person wrote:
Betzz wrote:
Everybody Loves Raymond wrote:
eric hussein miami wrote:
Maybe Raymond's Yugo will break down on his way to the polls and his vote won't count.

I don't own Euro-trash. I drive a Town Car.

One of the new Town Cars that was built in Canada? :laugh:

Good research. Any Town Car after 06 will be built in Ontario Canada. I assume that means parts as well.

And how very convenient that Raytroll has an '06 Town Car, don't you think? :huh: :laugh:

Jealous? Bet you drive some German crapolla that cost as much as my TC and has 1/4 the room and comfort.
"LOL" a Lincoln Town Car "LOL"
THE CAR THAT WISHES IT WAS A CADILLAC...!!!:woohoo: :woohoo:

People who drive Cadillacs often have the last name of Jefferson, Washington, and have first names like al-Kaleeb, Amos, Ruffus, Catfish. They have gangster whitewalls and chrome bling. No thanks.

So I'll just drive my TC.

Re:Chrysler plans to cut 1,000 salaried jobs

Posted by Just Reading - 2008/07/26 05:58

Everybody Loves Raymond wrote:

Just Reading wrote:

Everybody Loves Raymond wrote:

Betzz wrote:

unaffiliated_person wrote:

Betzz wrote:

Everybody Loves Raymond wrote:

eric hussein miami wrote:

Maybe Raymond's Yugo will break down on his way to the polls and his vote won't count.

I don't own Euro-trash. I drive a Town Car.

One of the new Town Cars that was built in Canada? :laugh:

Good research. Any Town Car after 06 will be built in Ontario Canada. I assume that means parts as well.

And how very convenient that Raytroll has an '06 Town Car, don't you think? :huh: :laugh:

Jealous? Bet you drive some German crapolla that cost as much as my TC and has 1/4 the room and comfort.

"LOL" a Lincoln Town Car "LOL"

THE CAR THAT WISHES IT WAS A CADILLAC...!!!:woohoo: :woohoo:

People who drive Cadillacs often have the last name of Jefferson, Washington, and have first names like al-Kaleeb, Amos, Ruffus, Catfish. They have gangster whitewalls and chrome bling. No thanks.

So I'll just drive my TC.

:blink: I had a Cadillac and my last name is McGowan, first of John, Elvis loved Cadillacs, but the best cars I ever had were 1965, 1966 and 1967 Pontiac GTO'S, I think the 65 was the best of all, the old 55 chevy I had wasn't too bad either....

BTW Raymond do you belong to the good old Southern Hunting club?? I bet you Do :)

Is this your flag Ray

<http://www.tightrope.cc/catalog/images/kkk-blood-flag.jpg>

Re:Chrysler plans to cut 1,000 salaried jobs

Posted by utocoman - 2008/07/26 08:06

Everybody Loves Raymond wrote:

Just Reading wrote:

Everybody Loves Raymond wrote:

Betzz wrote:

unaffiliated_person wrote:

Betzz wrote:

Everybody Loves Raymond wrote:

eric hussein miami wrote:

Maybe Raymond's Yugo will break down on his way to the polls and his vote won't count.

I don't own Euro-trash. I drive a Town Car.

One of the new Town Cars that was built in Canada? :laugh:

Good research. Any Town Car after 06 will be built in Ontario Canada. I assume that means parts as well.

And how very convenient that Raytroll has an '06 Town Car, don't you think? :huh: :laugh:

Jealous? Bet you drive some German crapolla that cost as much as my TC and has 1/4 the room and comfort.

"LOL" a Lincoln Town Car "LOL"

THE CAR THAT WISHES IT WAS A CADILLAC..!!!:woohoo: :woohoo:

People who drive Cadillacs often have the last name of Jefferson, Washington, and have first names like al-Kaleeb, Amos, Ruffus, Catfish. They have gangster whitewalls and chrome bling. No thanks.

So I'll just drive my TC.

The Democratic party enjoys your unending support for change.

=====

Re:Chrysler plans to cut 1,000 salaried jobs

Posted by Betzz - 2008/07/26 08:49

Everybody Loves Raymond wrote:

Should have known you drive a Turdota. Yeah, built in Indiana and every yen in profit goes to the masters in Tokyo. Hope you are happy with yourself.

Could have bought a F150 and put some Americans to work, but no . . .

:laugh: Yes, I am happy with myself, thank you! I helped put dinner on the table for every single American who built that truck. And, assuming that the American workers have a 401(k), they benefited from those profits as well.

We used to have an F150 . . . it was about 3 years old when the transfer case went out followed shortly by heater core. Prior to that, my husband had an F250 that blew the engine 2 months after he bought it. Getting burned twice is more than enough.

=====

Re:Chrysler plans to cut 1,000 salaried jobs

Posted by Everybody Loves Raymond - 2008/07/27 10:08

Betzz wrote:

Everybody Loves Raymond wrote:

Should have known you drive a Turdota. Yeah, built in Indiana and every yen in profit goes to the masters in Tokyo. Hope you are happy with yourself.

Could have bought a F150 and put some Americans to work, but no . . .

:laugh: Yes, I am happy with myself, thank you! I helped put dinner on the table for every single American who built that truck. And, assuming that the American workers have a 401(k), they benefited from those profits as well.

We used to have an F150 . . . it was about 3 years old when the transfer case went out followed shortly by heater core. Prior to that, my husband had an F250 that blew the engine 2 months after he bought it. Getting burned twice is more than enough.

Sounds like if you followed proper maintenance procedures you'd have vehilces that last longer.

=====

Re:Chrysler plans to cut 1,000 salaried jobs

Posted by eric hussein miami - 2008/07/27 10:30

Good point, Ray.

How long has it been since you've had a mental checkup?

=====

Re:Chrysler plans to cut 1,000 salaried jobs

Posted by utocoman - 2008/07/27 11:16

eric hussein miami wrote:
Good point, Ray.

How long has it been since you've had a mental checkup?
Unfortunately in the prison setting he was not a stand out kinda guy (kinda kept a low profile from Bubba) so I am willing to bet his only mental health testing was during admission.

=====

Re:Chrysler plans to cut 1,000 salaried jobs

Posted by Betzz - 2008/07/27 11:58

Everybody Loves Raymond wrote:
Betzz wrote:

Everybody Loves Raymond wrote:
Should have known you drive a Turdota. Yeah, built in Indiana and every yen in profit goes to the masters in Tokyo.
Hope you are happy with yourself.

Could have bought a F150 and put some Americans to work, but no . . .

:laugh: Yes, I am happy with myself, thank you! I helped put dinner on the table for every single American who built that truck. And, assuming that the American workers have a 401(k), they benefited from those profits as well.

We used to have an F150 . . . it was about 3 years old when the transfer case went out followed shortly by heater core. Prior to that, my husband had an F250 that blew the engine 2 months after he bought it. Getting burned twice is more than enough.

Sounds like if you followed proper maintenance procedures you'd have vehilces that last longer.

Please explain what maintenance is normally done on a two-month-old vehicle? :blink: Also, what do you do to maintain the heater core? :laugh: :laugh: :laugh:

=====

Re:Chrysler plans to cut 1,000 salaried jobs

Posted by eric hussein miami - 2008/07/27 12:16

You don't want to know what Ray does to the heater core.

=====

Re:Chrysler plans to cut 1,000 salaried jobs

Posted by Betzz - 2008/07/27 12:43

eric hussein miami wrote:
You don't want to know what Ray does to the heater core.

You are right . . . I really don't! :laugh:

=====